FORMER SHELTON STUDENT EXHIBITS AT COLLEGE

Former Shelton State student Michiko K. Reed will exhibit a collection of watercolors in the Skyland Campus library beginning April 3 and continuing through April 21.

Ms. Reed, who was born and raised in Nagasaki, Japan, came to the United States in 1972. She was primarily self-taught until she met Professor Richard Brough in a watercolor class at the University of Alabama in 1984. She studied with him through May 1985.

Always attracted by watercolors, Ms. Reed loves the freely floating colors on the paper. She begins most of her work by splashing water on paper, adding colors and moving the paper all around. Tilting and swinging make the colors take action. When she gets the feeling she wants in the wash, she starts to work on the design. A successful first wash is hard to get in one try. Even if the wash is successful, the design may not go far enough to satisfy her.

Unless wash and design are both perfect, she starts all over again.

She loves to paint nature, its combination of sensitivity and toughness. Common subjects include flowers, landscapes, seascapes, and rockscapes.
